EL CERRITO — The 25 students in Joanne Ahrens' first grade class at Castro Elementary School were wide-eyed and awed on the first day of school.

On the blackboard of Room 18 was the neatly printed greeting, "Good morning, boys and girls. Welcome to the First Grade. My name is Mrs. Ahrens."

The students sat quietly at their desks. The girls' dresses were starched and spotless; their hair was perfectly parted, bowed and pigtailed.

The boys wore crisp new shirts and jeans. Running shoes of all colors practically glowed on their feet. They hadn't hit the playground yet. No wear. No dirt.

At Castro School, which is at 7125 Donal Ave., things went well the first day. This year's first day enrollment is 295, up from last year's 250. The increase comes because Cameron School on Gladys Avenue closed last year. Castro now has some of those students.

Principal Leo Gaspardone was pleased with how things went on Sept. 7, opening day. He set up tentative classes in May, before enrollment figures are definite — "ouija-boarding," he called it.

This year he said parents planned ahead. Only five new children were unexpectedly brought in on the first day, so none of the classes were overloaded.

"Where's that ouija board? I'm going to take it to the track," Gaspardone said.

To handle the additional students, Castro Elementary has two more regular classroom teachers this year, and one additional teacher for the physically handicapped. At Castro, 36 students are enrolled in a special education program for children with physical and learning disabilities.

Gaspardone likes the combination of regular and special education classes. He said special education teachers have to be creative and innovative. "It's a lively place," he said.

At the city's five elementary schools, which cover grades kindergarten through sixth, the total first-day enrollment was 1317. Another 769 seventh and eight-graders enrolled at Portola Junior High, and 1313 signed in at El Cerrito High School.

David Taylor, assistant superintendent of the Richmond Unified School District, said these figures will increase as more students enroll.

Back in Room 18, Ahrens, who has been teaching at Castro since 1969, gathered the class around her after recess. Outside in the hall a child was crying.

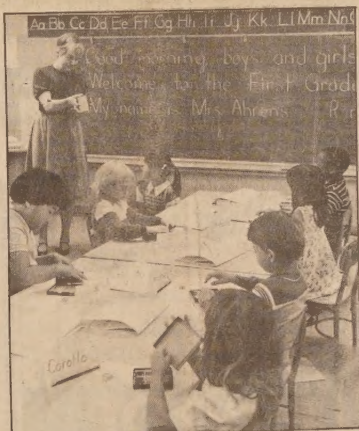

"You all remember what it was like when you started kindergarten," she said in a warm and practiced voice.

"Yes," the children chorused, pleased to be older and wiser now.

Ahrens explained the program for the handicapped to her class. "These children have different problems with their bodies. We don't want to do anything to make them feel bad," she said.

"Some can't see or hear, some have a hard time talking, but they all have feelings just like you do. When you see them, be a friend."

First grader Karen Maoki raised his hand. "I know what it's like to be teased, my cousin comes over and teases me," he said.

At their desks the children were asked to raise the hand they write with. Then with the intensity of diamond cutters, gripping their pencils at the very bottom, they practiced their printing.

"On the first day of school they're very intimidated. They are so quiet, so good," said Ahrens.

"You should see them in January."

City unmoved by vigil

Fast supporters win no votes from Council

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — The City Council faced a large and vocal group of supporters of the Fast for Life on Monday, but each council member refused to endorse the fast.

During a lengthy late-night discussion, one council member called the fast in Oakland "a kind of extortion" and another called it "suicide."

About 50 supporters of the Fast for Life gathered outside the city hall Monday to hold a silent vigil in support of the four Oakland fasters who on Sept. 14 will have fasted for 40 days. Trained by a television camera and crew, the group later jammed the council chambers carrying posters and candles.

Joseph Kempkes, an organizer of the vigil, asked the council to declare Sept. 14 and 15 Fast for Life Days in Albany. The four Oakland fasters have said they would fast until there is a significant step towards the reduction of nuclear arms. There are also fasters in Germany and France.

Kempkes said the council should not consider nuclear disarmament a problem for national politicians.

"I think it is a dangerous misplace of our trust to think that our Washington representatives alone can get us out of the arms race," he said. "This country has spent too many years in arms buildup and has spent too much money for one group to reverse this trend. The movement toward nuclear disarmament has to start at the local level and it has to start now."

Council member William Johns said, however, that local governments did not have the time, staff or expertise to solve the problem. Johns said that publicity appeared to be the goal of the supporters of the fast, and added, "I sincerely hope that some good will come out of your publicity."

Like other council members, Henry Kruse Jr. said he questioned the water-only fast as a way to achieve peace.

"I do not believe the ends justify the means," Kruse said. "No one wants nuclear war. We all want peace. But to threaten to allow one's self to die is a kind of extortion. It is a pressure tactic. It is an effort to by pass the democratic process. It is akin to a child's temper tantrum."

Council member Edward J. McManus said he supported nuclear disarmament, but considered that the fasters "were in a sense committing suicide for an end to nu-

Schools

Where the students are

By BARBARA ERICKSON

ENROLLMENT in Richmond Unified School District's new basic schools has surpassed projections, but overall first-day attendance dropped dramatically compared with last year, preliminary figures show.

Figures from Richmond Unified show that opening day elementary students numbered 11,974 and secondary students were 10,070, for a total of 22,044. Last year first-day figures showed 26,072, with more than half of those in secondary school.

But David Taylor, district spokesman, cautioned against taking the first-day figures too seriously. Enrollment can change greatly by the end of the month, he said.

In the district's four new basic schools, however, the numbers were higher than expected. Ford, which projected 304 students, had 339; Mira Vista, projecting 410, had 413; Sheldon, projecting 202, had 200, the only one to fall below expectations; and Stewart, projecting 243, had 247.

The basic schools, officially called Alternative Basic Commitment schools, were adopted last year and will emphasize parent participation, academics and discipline.

Throughout the district, officials say, enrollment will continue to rise until the end of September. Official figures are reported at that time.

This year, Taylor said, the schools are predicting an official enrollment of 26,132. Last year the district had 27,- 711, compared to 28,310 the year before.

Since 1969, when enrollment hit a peak of 41,167, Richmond Unified and most other districts in the state have declined in student population.

EC pushes for development

By GORDON RADDUE

EL CERRITO — The City Council has given enthusiastic endorsement to a policy statement and directive designed, according to City Manager Ronald Creagh, to "bring some life into the redevelopment process."

Prepared by city staff as a follow-up to the findings of the ad hoc Land Use Committee appointed by the City Council/Redevelopment Agency, the policy statement calls for the city to "make every effort to streamline its review process to further minimize project delays."

War is dangerous

Ten-year-old Owen Hershey of Albany drew this poster in conjunction with the city's 75th anniversary celebration. His apocalyptic view of the future has added fuel to the fire to declare Albany a nuclear free zone. See story, Page 2.

Nuclear debate rages

Albany activists want city to take a stand

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — A supporter of a move to have Albany declared a nuclear free zone recently deluged the City Council with a barrage of facts and figures describing the horror and devastation of a nuclear attack. But more effective than the statistics may have been the story of a 10-year-old boy whose contribution to the city's 75th anniversary poster project showed Albany after a nuclear attack.

Dr. Henry Vynder, a Richmond member of Physicians for Social Responsibility, told the council on Sept. 6 that a 20 megaton bomb — 14,000 times more powerful than the bomb dropped on Hiroshima — dropped on San Francisco would immediately vaporize everyone within about 11 miles. The winds would sweep through the area at 500 miles per hour, and steel and concrete buildings would collapse.

Anyone who glanced at the fireball caused by the explosion would be blinded and those who took refuge in civil defense shelters would be incinerated, Vynder said. Almost all of the Bay Area's 3.6 million people would be killed or injured. The living might wish they were dead, because they would be plagued by disease, radiation poison and pestilence.

"There would be a plentitude of insects," Vynder said. "The cockroaches would survive. I know what I am saying sounds bizarre, but I think that is what we are trying to tell you."

Vynder was one of several speakers who urged the council to support the move to have Albany declared a nuclear free zone. Joseph Kempkes, an Albany resident, said he and about eight other residents would soon finish drafting the proposed initiative.

Kempkes said they would then begin asking voters to sign a petition to put the initiative on the April, 1984 ballot. Kempkes will need 10 percent of the voters or about 900 signatures to get the proposal on the April ballot.

Kempkes said he was appearing before the council to solicit members' views on the proposal. But council members declined to discuss the issue.

Catherine Webb, an Albany resident, told the council about the young boy's poster.

"At the top of the page was Albany's past which showed native Americans," Webb said. "In the middle was the present with cars and planes. The future was the atom bomb. That is what the children are saying right now in our schools, and I think that is a tragedy."

But not everyone agreed with the proposal for a nuclear free Albany.

"I think it is the epitome of stupidity for these people to come here with this proposal after what happened last week," Harry D. Bergondy said, referring to the Soviet attack on the Korean airliner.

Irene Crosbie said the nuclear free zone proposal "was playing into the hands of the Russians."

"These people are well-intentioned, but we are going the way of bizarre San Francisco and Berkeley," she added.

The Campaign Against Nuclear War, a Washington, D.C. organization, said 23 U.S. cities have been declared nuclear free zones. Several other cities, including Berkeley, are scheduled to vote on the issue this year.

An early draft of the initiative said once Albany was declared a nuclear free zone, the city would prohibit radioactive material within city limits, except for purposes not related to war. The city also would sell any investments in industries and institutions which are "involved in nuclear war or the preparation for nuclear war."

Development process simplified

It suggests a review of existing ordinances and policies, such as parking and landscaping requirements and the provision of off-site improvements by developers, to alleviate conditions that hinder or discourage acceptable development.

The City Council/Redevelopment Agency took steps last fiscal year to establish a more aggressive stance on redevelopment and commercial development in the city. The Land Use Committee was created and the redevelopment budget provided for a full-time redevelopment associate position — filled by Randy Starbuck — to further redevelopment goals and objectives.

The policy statement also suggests modifications to zoning and design review standards as incentives. A promotional campaign including brochures and multimedia presentations to developers is among the proposals.

In presenting the policy statement, Creagh urged the council to "get the word out to boards and commissions that this is what you want to do. Emphasis should be placed on encouraging development and not waiting for perfect development."

Council member Margaret Collins, who has been highly critical of the city's project reviewing process, was exuberant in her support of the policy statement. "I say 'Yea, let's go.' I think it's tremendous. Staff has done a great job."

Council member Howard Abelson said the statement "breaks shackles that have held us down in the past. We've gotten into a rut the last 10 years. I'd like to see new ideas and innovations that maintain high standards."

Council member James E. Allen Jr., was absent, but his support of the policy statement was conveyed by Mayor Jean Siri, who added her own. "We've developed a reputation for being 'picky, picky' (on new development)," she said.

School budget approved, but no teacher contracts yet

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — The Albany school board unanimously passed its 1983-84 budget last week but teacher representatives called the district's final figures a "bargaining play."

With teacher contract negotiations still unsettled, school officials passed a budget of nearly $8.1 million, an increase of 5.5 percent over last year.

"The game's just started," Albany Teachers' Association president Bill Savage said after the board meeting. "This (the adopted budget) doesn't mean anything to me."

School officials and teacher representatives met twice this summer to try to hammer out a revised teacher contract for the 1983-84 school year. Classes started Sept. 7 with teachers working under last year's contract.

At the most recent meeting, held on Sept. 2, negotiators failed to resolve outstanding issues. The extent of salary increases was not even addressed at that session.

Both teachers and the administration still have not brought specific salary increase proposals to the bargaining table. But teachers, Savage said, are anxious for raises which keep pace with changes in the Consumers' Price Index.

"How far behind can you get?," Albany High history teacher Charles Clarke asked.

School officials are dissecting this year's budget to determine where money can be found to offer employees salary increases. According to Superintendent Stephen Goldstone, each one percent increase in teacher and other employee salaries costs the district $70,000.

Last year teachers received a 3.87 percent salary adjustment. Increases in 1980-81 and 1981-82 were 10 and five percent, respectively.

"Before you can expand programs, there has to be a commitment to upgrading teachers' salaries," Clarke said. "We need to try to attract people to the profession. We're concerned about morale."

Administration officials emphasize that new state money, which became available after the passage of school reform legislation this summer, does not affect money available for salaries.

"Other districts made cuts earlier this year," Goldstone said. "We didn't. Others look like the teachers' programs, (while) we're just maintaining."

In other action, the school board accepted the in the form of computer equipment from two computer companies, CompuPro and Apple Computer.

CompuPro, which donated nearly $22,000 of equipment and software last spring, contributed four minicomputers and four drive cabinets over $17,560 to Albany's computer literacy program.

The Apple Computer donation, part of a give-away campaign, placed a "Kids Can't Wait" in every Albany school except the Children's Center. The market value of Apple's donation is $10,770.

School officials also reported that the plan to expand Albany High's swimming pool in part by solar panels has been shelved for the time being. According to Superintendent John Fike, the repeal of certain state laws may kill the project.

Previously, a certain portion of the amount used to install solar heating for swimming pools could be used as a credit against state tax liabilities. Fike is optimistic, however, that a corrective measure which would nullify credit for solar installation at educational pools will be passed by the legislature.

The superintendent reported several new hires:

- Gary Carlone is teaching at the high school.
- Obata and Susan Power are at the middle school.
- At Cornell, Marilyn Chamberlain, Shirley Egan, Christa Bundy-Buckingham and Shirley Egan are teaching this fall. Mary Louise Green is now teaching at the middle school.
- At the Children's Center, Leslie Rae and Redmond are new teachers and Anthony Perkins, Naveh, Sheila Murry, Ruth Gerber and Celestine are new aides.
- Marian Johnson is the new secretary to the superintendent.

Council will not support fasters clear weapons.

"Morally I cannot support it," he added.

But Wendy Tripp, an Albany resident, told the council that the fasters did not want to die.

"Suicide is something you do when you are full of anger and despair," Tripp said. "But the fasters are filled with hope and love....I don't see it as a violent act through they put themselves under a lot of stress. We see the same concern for people who are starving the world."

At midnight, Kruse moved to adjourn the meeting. He asked for a minute of silent prayer for peace and for the 269 people who died aboard the Korean ship.

Strike halts work at energy company

Employees have gone on strike at Williams and Lane Energy Systems Co. after contract negotiations bogged down.

The strike began Sept. 8 at 1700 Eastshore Highway on the Albany-Berkeley border. The company is a distributor of construction, engineering and machine parts.

The striking workers are represented by the Operating Engineers, Local Three, an Oakland-based union. Thomas Westoby, the business representative of the local, said the strike was a "defensive action."

"They wanted to take away things we (the employees) already have."

Westoby and a company spokesman refused to discuss the negotiations. But Westoby said the two sides seemed close to "an agreement in principle."

The union represents more than 100 employees at the company's Albany and San Leandro offices.

Library shut

On Wednesday, Sept. 14, the central library and all branches of the Contra Costa Library System will be closed for two hours, from 10 a.m. to noon in order that all library employees may attend a special annual staff meeting.

A very special swimmer

El Cerrito woman tackles the Golden Gate

By GORDON RADDUE

EL CERRITO — A Suzanne Heim, Cindy Farber is not. But with the help of some inspiring words from Winston Churchill, she proved she is quite a Cindy Farber by swimming across the Golden Gate from the Marin side to Fort Point.

It took twice as long as she'd expected and she is not ready to pose a threat to Heim, the 25-year-old San Rafael woman who two days earlier completed four crossings of the Golden Gate in 2 hours and 5 minutes, the first time such a feat had been accomplished.

Although Farber's single crossing took an hour, her achievement was remarkable in itself: she's only been swimming for four years.

She had expected to cover the 7/10ths of a mile distance in half the time, but a strong current threw her off course and she wound up swimming an estimated mile and a half before she finally reached shore.

"When I started out it was real nice, calm, smooth water — just perfect," said Farber. "I felt I should really swim fast and go for some kind of a record. But when I got under the bridge the current was running faster than the tide book said."

"I was stunned. I really didn't think I'd make it. Then I thought of Churchill's words — 'Never, never, never, never give up. I started saying 'never' with every stroke."

She also drew plenty of encouragement from her husband, Doug, and friend David Norwood, who stayed close by in a row boat to provide moral support and guide her on her circuitous course.

"I tired quicker than I should have because I was swimming too fast," Farber said. "But once I hit the shore and realized I'd made it, elation just took over everything."

It called for a celebration and a celebration there was.

"We had a picnic on a hill at Lincoln Park overlooking the Golden Gate," she said, adding: "There was a little champagne."

The 31-year-old mother of three (son John, 8, and daughters Sharon, 6, and Susie, 3) is a self-taught swimmer, most of her learning taking place at the El Cerrito Swim Center.

"I'd been planning to swim the Golden Gate for more than three years," she said. "After my third child was born nearly four years ago, I just felt I needed to do something challenging to prove that I could do it."

She began preparing in earnest for the Golden Gate ordeal in May.

"I did some cold water training at Aquatic Park in San Francisco and also did some swimming off the Berkeley Marina," she said. "I did a swim from near the Golden Gate to Alcatraz and found that you don't have to worry about anything so long as you have the tides and current figured out."

"I have to say it was a group effort rather than a solo effort," she said. "I got a lot of help and encouragement from my husband and my friends who looked after my children while I was training for the swim."

A magical little touch was added as Farber and her boatmen were completing their journey.

"Just when we were hitting the shore," she said, "a seal popped up between us."

Not even record-setting Suzanne Heim got that kind of reception.

On the landfill

I want to thank Norman Colby for the provocative article on West County's landfill use. I am only sorry that the article was cut in the Richmond paper since Richmond is where there is the greatest need for more information.

The franchise agreement that stated no new contracts outside of West County could be made or renewed was signed in 1967 to ensure San Francisco's garbage did not come into Richmond. However, this agreement has never been enforced by the City of Richmond.

The same words appear in the April 1, 1980 franchise extending the exclusive monopoly another 25 years. The 1967 agreement with Berkeley Sanitary (a private company) did not include residential waste which is controlled publicly by the City of Berkeley. Therefore, a new agreement must have been made.

It is very important that some thought be given to the future when the dump will be full, the year 2006-2020, depending on the enforcement.

I did not say I would exempt any royalty for garbage destined for a waste-energy plant. The West County plant that is proposed will require 900 tons per day, twice that now dumped. A waste-energy plant is not a be-all, end-all solution. One fourth of the garbage brought in goes to the landfill as ash. There is additional air pollution and traffic into West County. Royalties from any out-of-county garbage for waste-energy plants or dumps seem to me the only way of planning for the area's future.

I was surprised that a waste-energy solution was even considered in Berkeley, where the air is relatively clean. With the prevailing westerlies, all the air pollution from the stacks would have ended up in the Berkeley Hills.

The best solution to the quantity of garbage is resource recovery by recycling. El Cerrito has the lowest garbage rate in the Bay Area because of the amount not being dumped but recycled. The amount being recycled is steadily growing because of the surcharge paid by the residents of El Cerrito.

Thanks again for considering this very important planning matter.

Pot luck with Olga Bier

Almost immediately after our arrival in England, we took to the shops, as Harrod's and Barker's and the others were preparing for their yearly hysterical sale of chinaware. This apparently is an event some folk travel cross country to get to while others go into training so they can participate vigorously in the event.

At Harrod's, the celebrated department store of department stores, it seemed as if a whole floor had been cleared in anticipation. As far as the eye could see, crates and packing materials lay all about. Even though the merchandise was not yet for sale or completely displayed or even all unpacked, there were many of us roaming about, examining at the dishes.

For someone as interested in food and the wares needed to prepare and serve it as I am, this can be described simply as "pig heaven." If this had not been the end of my trip (and my finances), I would have bought dozens of sets of china!

The prices for the top-line quality were considerably less than what we pay here. Even the seconds were gorgeous and reasonably priced. There are many "seconds shops" in London and even though we were warned that the prices were touristy, they were still low compared to what they are here at home.

English silver and the classic china of Royal Doulton, Royal Worcester, Wedgwood and Spode were mixed with names unfamiliar to me but apparently treasured there, as their designs and prices were comparable to the better known brands. I think I would like to have different sets of china for each meal of the day, varying with my mood and menu. And I would take a special jaunt to London just to buy it all.

'Ave a sweet, luv

Our meals, though mostly continental in cuisine, seemed always to end with beautiful large ripened strawberries with incredibly heavy cream — except for the night we ate at a nearby pub. Our varied dishes included grilled white fish, steak and kidney pie, and an Irish stew (which our Italian waitress whispered to us was not really Irish because her mother was part Irish and this wasn't the way she made it).

But what I remember best of this meal was that I ordered a "Spotted Dick" for dessert. I took one taste of the white suet and raisin pudding and offered it to anyone within hearing range who would remove it from my sight. A bit heavy in the mouth, to put it mildly.

In between our mugs of warm, strong beer and the loud choruses of songs we belted at each other, Cousin Sylvia promised a sweet I would like. So the following Sunday in her rose-bordered garden, after we enjoyed some good crusty fried chicken, she served a trifle which I thoroughly loved.

Trifle is a heavenly dessert made of cake, fruit and custard with whipped cream. It seems to have as many variations as there are cooks. Basically it is a pound cake cut into thick slices which are spread with raspberry jam and placed jam-side-up in a glass bowl. Chopped almonds and some sherry and/or brandy are sprinkled on and allowed to soak in. Then raspberries are spread over the cake.

A thick cold custard is spread over that and whipped cream is then gently piled over all. Garnished with more berries and almonds, it is refrigerated briefly before serving.

I have a version of a trifle I have made for many years that cuts calories a bit but is very showy and quite tasty. Having just viewed the real thing, I felt justified in calling this:

'The Crown Jewels'

Lightly butter a spring form pan. Line around the edges with lady fingers standing up (creating the "crown"). Split enough lady fingers to line the bottom of the pan. Spread them with strawberry jam, slivered almonds and triple sec or amaretto.

Make and chill until firm 3 separate kinds of gelatin — red for rubies, green for emeralds and yellow for topaz. Use a flat pan so the gelatins will come out as a sheet about 1/2-inch thick. When set, cut across in both directions, making small cubes (jewels).

Make 1 pkg. of strawberry gelatin in a bowl. Chill only until syrupy. Beat until frothy and fold into 1 cup of whipped cream.

Toss in enough of the cubed gelatin jewels for color and spoon it all into the pan with the lady fingers.

Pipe whipped cream around the inside edge of the "crown" and arrange some of the remaining jewels in the center. Use the rest for dessert or in a salad the next day. Slice some large strawberries and stand the heart-shaped slices around on the dream border.

Refrigerate until serving time. Then gently remove the spring ring and present the crown to the guest of honor for viewing before slicing to serve.

2 teens nabbed

ALBANY — Two Oakland teen-agers, one of them a fugitive from a youth correctional facility, have been arrested for burglary after they were found inside a Carmel Avenue home, according to police.

Albany Police Capt. Mel Boyd said Sept. 9 that the two suspects are believed to be linked to a previous break-in in the 700 block of Carmel, three burglaries in the 900 block of Carmel and a burglary on Evelyn Street.

The previous police record of the two young men, ages 16 and 17, dates to 1980, when they were arrested for a burglary in San Leandro. They were arrested on burglary charges again in 1981 and in 1982. The 16-year-old served a term with the California Youth Authority and has been paroled since June.

Police said the 17-year-old escaped shortly after being remanded to the custody of Los Ceros Boys Camp in June of 1982.

Police were called to the 700 block of Carmel by a resident who thought he heard suspicious noises. When officers investigated they spotted someone inside a neighbor's home.

The youngsters attempted to run through the home, and police had to kick in a door before finally apprehending them.

The 16-year-old gave police an address in the 1200 block of Manuel Court in Oakland, while the 17 year old lists his address as the 300 block of 105th Avenue in Oakland.

SINCE 1905, WE'VE BEEN THE BEST MECHANIC FOR THE MONEY.

Back when the cattle in Contra Costa County outnumbered the people and the only rapid transit was a horse-drawn streetcar, an Oakland baker named Josiah Iverson founded the Iverson Banking Company on Macdonald near Third Street in Richmond.

In 1905, the bank moved to the corner of 8th Street, and in 1907, the Mechanics Bank was organized, named for its association with the mechanics working at the Standard Oil Company and the Santa Fe Railroad.

The first Mechanics Bank office, 8th & Macdonald, Richmond

The little office on 8th Street had only two employees; one to keep the records and one to help the customers (all 10 of them). Bookkeeping was done entirely by pen and ink in a Boston Ledger and the entire office was heated by a potbellied stove in the lobby.

It soon became apparent, however, that Mr. Iverson was a better baker than he was a banker.

And so the search for a more aggressive leader began.

The bank found their man in E. M. Downer, a former railway telegrapher. In the Fall of 1919, Downer was elected President of Mechanics Bank and spearheaded the bank's rapid growth. By 1920, the bank had increased its assets by more than 4000 percent.

Then came the Depression. There were some anxious days at Mechanics, but the threat of a run faded when Standard Oil officials made a show of faith by walking in and making a large deposit.

The 1940's brought the Big Band sound to radio and Henry Kaiser and his ship-building company to Richmond, and Mechanics Bank figured prominently in the prosperity; pioneering personal and automobile loans, and even installing the first drive-in tellers in Northern California. Between 1941 and 1945, bank assets increased dramatically from 7.9 million to 35.1 million.

Over the next 30 years, Mechanics Bank continued to prosper as new branches sprung up in Albany, El Sobrante, Pinole and San Pablo.

Today, we're handling more than 60,000 savings and checking accounts. That's more than any other bank in our area.

We're helping hundreds of East Bay families build new homes. Or improve the ones they own. We're providing customers with safety, security and the highest returns on their savings.

We're offering a full range of services from retirement accounts to Living Trusts.

Plus convenient hours, more branches, and more ways to serve you better.

Most importantly, we're continuing a 78-year-old commitment to our communities and their people. We devote everything we have to this area: all our energy, all our services and all our resources.

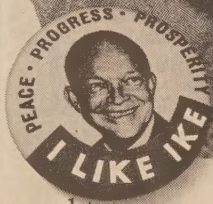

So no matter what your banking needs, take them into your neighborhood Mechanic.

You just can't do better for your money.

Police beat

Two nabbed for burglary

ALBANY — Police have arrested two men for a burglary, after one of the men was found inside a Ramona Avenue residence.

Albany police arrested Anthony Sandaval, 25, and Jesus E. Torres, 25, on Sept. 8. Both men gave Oakland addresses.

The two men apparently entered the residence from a second story bedroom window, police said. The police were called and found Sandaval inside the residence and Torres walking away from the residence.

Detective Greg Bone said the two suspects may be linked to several second-story burglaries in Albany. The suspects, who do not speak English, have denied any involvement in the burglaries, Bone said.

Fastfood stores hit by thieves

In unrelated incidents two fastfood restaurants were robbed and the employees threatened with weapons.

Albany police said the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant at 1101 San Pablo Ave. was robbed Sept. 6 at about 2 p.m. The thief came into the restaurant, ordered food, and then pulled a black two-inch revolver out of his pocket.

The thief demanded the clerk give him money, and he escaped with $127. No one was injured.

Later that same day Der Wienerhsnittel, at 1101 San Pablo Ave. in El Cerrito, was robbed by two men, one of whom was carrying a bayonet. Police said two employees were closing the restaurant when the suspects, wearing ski masks, entered and demanded the cash drawer, about $100. No one was injured. The men escaped with the cash.

ALBANY

Albany police report the following incidents for the week ending Sept. 11:

- A 68-year-old man, living on Cornell Avenue, reported that two men threatened him with a knife and stole his wallet, containing credit cards and $14. The empty wallet was later recovered in Richmond and returned.
- A yellow 10-speed Schwinn bicycle, worth $75, was reported stolen from a Francis Street residence.
- Three young boys were arrested near the Buchanan Avenue interchange and charged with possessing a stolen moped.

There were 20 adult arrests during the week.

EL CERRITO

El Cerrito police report the following incidents for the week ending Sept. 11:

- Del Norte Liquors, 11299 San Pablo Ave., reported that a thief, wearing a nylon stocking and pretending to have a weapon, stole $200.
- Val Strough, 11820 San Pablo Ave., reported that a man stole a $10,000 red Honda automobile. The man, who was described as "clean-cut," apparently asked to test drive the vehicle and did not return it.

There were 13 adult arrests during the week.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

The North-South hands are yesterday's, but trumps have been changed to break 3-0. The slam still makes, but South must be careful.

However, let's discuss South's bidding first.

South is going at least to game after the spade raise. His three-diamond bid is a force and in accordance with West Coast style (Mike Lawrence lives in California), tells partner that he wants diamond help. North goes to just three spades, but South makes a four-heart slam try. North bids five hearts to show his heart king and a maximum for his previous bidding. South bids the spade slam.

He ruffs West's king of clubs at trick one and plays his spade ace. East shows out, and South has an immediate problem. He can't draw trumps and still ruff out two of his potential diamond losers.

Should he lay down the diamond ace to guard against a singleton king in the West hand? Should he go to dummy to take a diamond finesse and guard against finding East with all seven diamonds?

A rubber bridge player should avoid the finesse. A match point player should take it. Either way the slam will make because dummy's K-9 of spades are in back of West's J-8.
